

COVID-19 - Update on Assurity Consulting Service Provision (October 2021)

Many customers have started to settle on their style of work as well as their ongoing operating practices as we see further and increasing demand for our services. Air and water quality, as well as fire safety management, Legionella and health and safety management (COVID-19, general and topic specific), are particular areas where duty holders and those managing buildings are seeking the reassurance of accredited, independent and professional support with their compliance management.

Recognising the advice provided by the government, devolved administrations, national public health bodies and NHS, Assurity Consulting will continue to diligently deliver our services, review our risk assessments and safe methods of work, and we are committed to supporting our customers whilst maintaining the safety of all our employees as priorities.

Through October, we are looking to safely increase the number of employees who can return to work from the office, continuing to operate 'normal' office hours and delivering all our essential site inspection and assessment activities as required, with safe working procedures. We are also collaborating with all customers to reflect the delivery methods they require for support be it face to face or remote. Our point of contact for our customers with their consultants and account managers will be through the usual channels.

I would again like to thank all our employees for the huge efforts they have put into maintaining the high quality of work we always strive to achieve over all the disruption of the last eighteen months.
